

© Emilie Solbakken / Visit Helgeland

ARCHAEOLOGICAL WALK TO KIRKEHELLEREN

Seasonal Opening

All year around

Capacity / number of guests

Minimum 1, maximum 35

Duration

3 hours

Level

Grade 2

Included

- Boat tickets
- Warm drinks

Distance from town

146 km

ABOUT

Join us for an enlightening archaeological walk to Kirkehelleren on the picturesque island of Sanna. This fascinating journey takes you through breathtaking landscapes where ancient history and stunning natural beauty intertwine.

Kirkehelleren is renowned for its remarkable history and has been used by humans for around 9,000–9,500 years, making it one of the most important archaeological sites along the Norwegian coast.

Excavations at the site have revealed a wealth of archaeological findings, including remains of animals and food sources that provide valuable insights into the lives and diets of early coastal inhabitants.

As we walk along the scenic trails, your knowledgeable guide will share stories about the archaeological significance of Kirkehelleren and the discoveries that have shaped our understanding of early human settlement in this part of Norway.

The walk offers not only a connection to the distant past, but also the chance to experience the dramatic coastal landscapes, unique flora, and wildlife of Sanna. Whether you are passionate about archaeology or simply looking for a memorable outdoor experience, this walk is both educational and inspiring.

© Kristoffer Møllevik
/ Visit Helgeland